Token Allocation

The allocation has been done in a well-thought-out manner that caters to the requirements of various stakeholders. The allocation of tokens is as follows: 18% for pre-sale, 4.1% for advisers, 8.2% for reserves, 16% for the team, 4.1% for contributors, and 9.2% for public sale.

The pre-sale allocation of 18% is meant to incentivize early investors with a keen interest in the project's success. This allocation is designed to generate initial capital for the project and help it achieve its goals. The 4.1% allocation for advisers is meant to attract industry experts who can offer valuable guidance to the project. The reserve allocation of 8.2% is designed to ensure enough capital to sustain the project in case of market fluctuations or unexpected events.

The team allocation of 16% is crucial as it rewards the team members responsible for the project's development, marketing, and management. It also serves as an incentive for them to work hard and deliver the best possible results. The 4.1% allocation for contributors is meant to acknowledge the efforts of individuals who have contributed to the project meaningfully.

Token Allocation

Finally, the 9.2% allocation for public sale is designed to give everyone a fair chance to invest in the project. This allocation ensures that the project has a wide and diverse investor base, which is essential for its long-term success.

In conclusion, the allocation of tokens in aana.io is designed to cater to the requirements of various stakeholders and ensure the project's long-term success. The allocation ensures enough capital to sustain the project, incentivizes early investors, rewards the team, and acknowledges contributors' efforts. The public sale allocation ensures that everyone has a fair chance to invest in the project and become a part of its success story.
